

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

REPORT.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE POLICE DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE OF THE POLICE COMMISSIONER, 29 PEMBERTON SQUARE,
BOSTON, Dec. 31, 1913.

To His Excellency EUGENE N. FOSS, Governor.

YOUR EXCELLENCY:—As police commissioner for the city of Boston I have the honor to present, in compliance with the provisions of chapter 291 of the Acts of 1906, a report of the work of the police department for the year ended Nov. 30, 1913.

OFFENCES AGAINST THE LAWS.

Statistics concerning offences against the laws, which are given in full detail in another part of this report, are here summarized. The total number of arrests in 1913 was 81,767, as against 75,496 in 1912. The eight general divisions under which offences are classed show the following numbers for five years:—

NONRESIDENT OFFENDERS.

The proportion of nonresident offenders among the persons arrested for all causes showed a decrease in 1911 for the first time in ten years, but only one-hundredth of one per cent. In 1912 there was a further decrease of 1.70 per cent., and in 1913 an increase of .95 per cent. When the first police commission was established, in 1878, the percentage was 19.90; in 1913 it was 38.89. The statistics of the past ten years, covering arrests for all causes, are as follows:—

	Total Arrests.	Non-residents.	Percentage of Non-residents.
1904,	50,265	18,030	35.86
1905,	48,358	17,167	35.50
1906,	49,906	18,001	36.06

1911,	70,442	27,613	39.64
1912,	75,496	28,645	37.94
1913,	81,767	31,800	38.89

In the arrests for drunkenness the percentage of non-residents increased steadily for many years, but in 1911 there was a decrease from 1910 of seventy-six hundredths of one per cent., and in 1912 a further decrease of 1.37 per cent.; but in 1913 the percentage rose 1.15. The following table gives the statistics for ten years:—

	Total Arrests for Drunken- ness.	Percent- age of Nonresi- dents.		Total Arrests for Drunken- ness.	Percent- age of Nonresi- dents.
1904, . . .	33,511	43.86	1909, . . .	45,321	47.62

POLICE WORK ON JURY LISTS.

For the sixth year the police department, under the provisions of chapter 348, Acts of 1907, has assisted the election commissioners in ascertaining the qualifications of persons proposed for jury service. The police findings in these six years may be summarized as follows: —

	1906.	1908.	1910.	1911.	1912.	1913.	Totals.

VIOLATIONS OF THE AUTOMOBILE LAW.

The separate charges involving violations of provisions of the automobile law prosecuted in the year ended Nov. 30, 1913, numbered 3,190. These do not include charges against automobile drivers for violation of park rules or charges against automobile drivers for violation of traffic rules which were not violations of the automobile law; but they do include charges against automobile drivers for violations of park or traffic rules which were at the same time violations of the automobile law. The details of the prosecutions were as follows: —

Overspeeding,	1,178.
Failure to slow down and give signal at intersecting street, . .	914
Making improper turns at corners,	68

Operating recklessly,	23
Operating while intoxicated,	27
Operating on wrong side of street or not as near as possible to right curb,	93
Failure to stop for street cars or other vehicles or pedestrians,	14
Lamps lacking, not lighted or not in proper condition,	455
Operating while unlicensed,	42
Operating without license on person,	94
Operating an unregistered car,	13
Operating a registered car without certificate of registration on person,	41
Operating a registered car without numbers, or with wrong numbers, or with numbers improperly displayed or not in proper condition,	35
Cutting out muffler,	7
Making an unreasonable noise with signalling apparatus,	3
Allowing an unreasonable amount of smoke to escape,	87
Miscellaneous,	96
Total,	3,190

The first record of an automobile prosecution by the Boston police was made only twelve years ago, when the single offence of the year 1901 was the driving of a motor car in a public park without a permit. In 1902 there were 33 prosecutions; in 1903, 67; in 1904, 179; in 1905, 102; in 1906, 308; in 1907, 961; in 1908, 1,865; in 1909, 2,196; in 1910, 2,334; in 1911, 1,899; in 1912, 2,359; in 1913, 3,190.

Accidents to persons, due to the operation of automobiles, are first recorded in the department reports in 1900. Beginning with that year their number to the present time is shown in the following table: —

YEAR.	Killed.	Injured.	YEAR.	Killed.	Injured.
1900,	—	19	1907,	7	105
1901,	—	8	1908,	6	127

1906,	1	110	1913,	22	495

PUBLIC LODGING HOUSES.

By chapter 242 of the Acts of 1904 it is provided that in cities of over 50,000 inhabitants every building not licensed as an inn, in which 10 or more persons are lodged for 25 cents each per day of twenty-four hours, or for any part thereof, shall be deemed a public lodging house, and by chapter 129 of the Acts of 1911 this law is made to apply to all buildings in such cities, notwithstanding that no price is charged for lodging.

In the city of Boston the police commissioner is authorized to grant licenses to such lodging houses after the inspector of buildings has certified that the building is provided with proper exits and appliances for alarming the inmates in case of fire, and the board of health has certified that the sanitary condition is satisfactory.

For these licenses 18 applications were received during the year; 17 of them were granted and 1 withdrawn.

The following shows the locations of the lodging houses and the number of persons lodged in each during the year: —

LOCATION.	Number lodged.	LOCATION.	Number lodged.
19 Causeway Street, . .	10,347	67 Pleasant Street, . .	24,846
164 Commercial Street, . .	22,083	63 Warrenton Street, . .	18,250
194 Commercial Street, . .	39,161	886 Washington Street, . .	69,672
234 Commercial Street, . .	16,441	1025 Washington Street, . .	42,239
268 Commercial Street, . .	23,317	1051 Washington Street, . .	38,855
242 Commercial Street, . .	21,663	1093 Washington Street, . .	31,162
17 Davis Street, . . .	37,961	1202 Washington Street, . .	46,952
120 Eliot Street, . . .	54,211	Total,	549,058
37 Green Street, . . .	31,079
2 Hudson Street, . . .	20,819

A statement similar to the foregoing has appeared annually in these reports for many years. The loss of life in a recent fire at a public lodging house makes it appropriate at this time to present further information on the subject. The first recommendation as to the licensing of public lodging houses was made in the annual report of the board of police for the year 1889, as follows: —

Attention is called to the increase in the number of cheap transient lodging houses, at which beds are furnished at from 10 to 30 cents per night. These places accommodate many respectable persons in necessitous circumstances, but are largely resorted to by the idle and vicious, and often harbor dangerous criminals. They should be required to be licensed, and to observe such regulations as the licensing power may establish.

This recommendation was repeated in a subsequent report, but no legislative action was taken until 1894, when a statute was passed applying only to Boston. In 1904 a new statute took its place, extending its provisions to all cities in the Commonwealth of more than 50,000 inhabitants, with such minor changes as were deemed necessary. This statute, chapter 242, Acts of 1904, provides that in such cities "every building not licensed as an inn, in which ten or more persons are lodged for a price of twenty-five cents or less for each person for a day of twenty-four hours, or for any part thereof, shall be deemed a public lodging house within the meaning of this act." Chapter 129, Acts of 1911, provides further that the act of 1904 shall apply to transient lodgers "notwithstanding that no price is charged for lodging."

The suggestion as to licensing public lodging houses made by the board of police in 1889 was based upon the consideration of crime and criminals, a condition affecting those houses which has since largely disappeared; and as a consequence of the suggestion the Legislature of 1894 placed the licensing in the hands of the police, with these important limitations, which still appear in sections 3 and 4 of the present act: —

SECTION 3. No such license shall be granted in any such city until the inspector of buildings thereof, or the other officer or board having authority to administer the laws and ordinances in regard to the construction of buildings therein, has certified that the building is provided with sufficient means of escape in case of fire, and that suitable appliances are provided for extinguishing fires and for giving alarm to the inmates in case of fire; and such officer or board may from time to time require such alterations to be made or such additional appliances to be provided as may in his or their judgment be necessary for the protection of life and property in case of fire.

SECTION 4. No such license shall be granted in any such city until the board of health thereof has certified that the building is provided with a sufficient number of water closets and urinals, and with good and sufficient means of ventilation; and the said board may from time to time require the licensee thoroughly to cleanse and disinfect all parts of said building and the furniture therein, to the satisfaction of such board.

No license for a public lodging house is ever issued or re-issued by the police commissioner until the certificates of the building commissioner and the board of health, required by the preceding sections, are actually in the possession of the chief clerk of the police department. On the other hand, the police commissioner enforces at once, by means of his power as licensing officer, every recommendation of the building commissioner or the board of health as to construction, arrangement or management affecting the health or safety of inmates of licensed houses. The police department takes care, meanwhile, of the part of the lodging-house business which is peculiarly its charge, that is to say, the character of the licensee, crime and disorder, and the fitness of the location, with reference to neighboring business and residential property.

It will be observed, therefore, that an applicant for a license for a public lodging house is required to secure concurrent and favorable action by three departments; and that, on the other hand, his application is rejected or his license, if granted, is amended or revoked on the objection of any one of those departments.

Licensees of public lodging houses make returns to the police department of the number of lodgings furnished by them respectively, and for twelve years the statistics have been printed in the annual reports of the police department. Brought together they show the following: —

YEAR.	Number of Public Lodging Houses licensed.	Number of Lodgings fur- nished.	YEAR.	Number of Public Lodging Houses licensed.	Number of Lodgings fur- nished.
1902, . . .	17	426,948	1909, . . .	20	558,339
1903, . . .	18	538,967	1910, . . .	19	564,758
1904, . . .	18	464,313	1911, . . .	17	537,251
1905, . . .	16	500,013	1912, . . .	17	505,139
1906, . . .	18	465,667	1913, . . .	17	549,058
1907, . . .	19	503,879	Total, . . .	-	6,202,960
1908, . . .	19	538,628

It will be observed that in twelve years more than six millions of lodgings have been furnished, at prices ranging from 10 to 25 cents. In the twenty years in which public lodging houses have been licensed in Boston, the number of lodgings furnished, judging by the figures of the past twelve years, must have been about ten millions; but up to the date of the disaster on Dec. 3, 1913, no serious fire and no loss of life by fire is chargeable to those houses in so far as I can learn from any records or through the remembrance of senior officers of this department.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS.

The juvenile laws, without substantial change to the present time, took effect Sept. 1, 1906. In my annual reports for 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909, I presented full statistics of their operation in Boston, but in the year 1910 I reported that because of the slight change in conditions from year to year they would not thereafter be specially compiled. After the lapse of four years it seems to be worth while to present them once more.

The statistics for 1909 showed that for one reason or another 3,655 children between seven and seventeen years of age were in the hands of the police within the twelve months; but as so many of them were in custody for no fault of their own, or for no specific offence committed at the time, or for offences not now dealt with as delinquencies, I deduct from the 1909 list, for present purposes, the following:—

Violation of newsboys' license rules,	244
Neglected children,	226
Runaways,	128
Suspicious persons,	72
Wayward children,	24
Violation of conditions of probation, pardon or parole,	29
Default warrants,	9
<hr/>
Total,	732

The item of violation of newsboys' license rules is omitted for the reason that since 1909 the school committee has taken charge of such offences, and they are not now prosecuted in court. After deducting these 732 cases the number remaining for 1909 is 2,923. But in 1909 some of the courts had begun the practice of referring to probation officers, without affirmative or negative action, many police applications for summonses for juvenile offenders, whose cases in consequence were not thereafter within the control or knowledge of the police. The practice was mentioned in the annual report for 1909; and the number of applications for summonses thus disposed of in that year was given as 228. As cases of that character had increased, in the police year ended Nov. 30, 1913, to 340, with 24 refusals of summonses, it has seemed to me that in order to show the work actually done by the police the offences for which applications for summonses were made and either referred or refused, as well as those for which summonses were granted, should appear. In the next table, therefore, all the 1913 offences for which summonses were asked, whether granted or not, are classified; but in the comparative part of the table under 1909, the analysis covers only summonses granted in that year, with the total at the end representing those referred or refused. It is in the light of this explanation that the table is to be read.

I have selected for further analysis certain classes of offences which represent in both numbers and character the special burdens of juvenile delinquency.

Applications to the courts by the police for summonses for larceny and attempted larceny numbered 657 in the police year, and they were disposed of by the courts as follows:—

Summonses not granted, applications being referred by the courts to probation officers without further action or knowledge of the police,	52

I take next the cases of breaking and entering buildings, dwellings, cars, vessels, and attempted breaking and entering. This is a crime which is especially disturbing to the community, and in the past four years has increased among juveniles more than 50 per cent. The extent to which they are concerned in it will be appreciated when it is known that in the year just closed the police applied for summonses for 524 juveniles charged with breaking and entering, of whom 495 were actually tried, and that in the same period the whole number of arrests of persons of all ages for the same offence, other than those tried as delinquents, was but 504. The 504, moreover, included 250 persons under twenty-one years of age additional to those tried as delinquents. The cases of the 524 juveniles charged with breaking and entering were disposed of as follows:—

Summonses not granted, applications being referred by the courts to probation officers without further action or knowledge of the police,	24

Larceny and breaking and entering are recognized as distinctly criminal offences against the property and peace of the community. Of less decided criminality, though distinct violations of statutes and ordinances, are certain offences which afflict orderly people and evoke from them a continuous outcry, of which the police are mainly the objects. For present purposes I have grouped malicious mischief and injury to property, trespass, throwing missiles in the streets and the breaking of glass, windows and lamps. Under these headings the police in the year ended Nov. 30, 1913, made 799 applications for summonses for children under seventeen years of age. The applications and the cases arising thereunder were disposed of by the courts as follows: —

Summonses not granted, applications being referred by the courts to probation officers without further action or knowledge of the police,		180
Application refused,		1
Placed on file,		308
Placed on probation,		132

Applications for summonses for juveniles charged with offences under the foregoing heads approximately doubled in four years. Similar offences as affecting railroads are classed by themselves, and ball playing in the streets is also made a separate entry. The significance of the term "trespass" will be better understood with the explanation that it covers in this case those offences not otherwise definable which are committed upon private premises.

Assault and battery as a violation of law by juveniles represents usually not attacks by boys upon one another, but as a rule the abuse by them of grown persons whose appearance in the streets arouses juvenile ridicule or hostility. The statistics covering this offence are substantially the same as those of four years ago. In the year just closed the 235 police applications for summonses for juveniles charged with assault and battery had the following results: —

Summonses not granted, applications being referred by the courts to probation officers without further action or knowledge of the police,	12
Applications refused,	5

"Stealing a ride" may be said to be as free from actual criminal intent as any violation of law can be; but as it causes annoyance and loss to drivers and owners of vehicles, and as the offenders themselves sometimes suffer death or injury, the practice is pernicious. Supplementing, then, the analysis of results of prosecutions in groups of distinctly criminal offences, I take this particular breach of the law as representing a boyish but dangerous practice. In the past year the police applied to courts for summonses for

117 boys charged with stealing rides. The results were as follows: —

Summonses not granted, applications being referred by the courts to probation officers without further action or knowledge of the police,	28
Placed on file,	58
Placed on probation,	16
Discharged,	3

The one sentence to the Concord Reformatory followed a request from the family of the boy, but afterwards an appeal was taken to the Superior Court, where the case was placed on file.

My purpose in presenting the foregoing matter is not at all to criticize the law or the courts, but: —

First. — To show for the information of all interested persons the operation of the delinquency laws in Boston, in so far as statistics can serve the purpose. I am aware that such showing must be incomplete; that in many cases the actual proceedings of the courts cannot be adequately represented by the formal record; that tasks and reprimands are given, that restitution is often required, and that many parents are personally warned of their obligations.

Second. — To show that in the seventh year of what might well be regarded as discouraging results, the Boston police are patiently and diligently performing their part of the enforcement of the juvenile laws, limited as such part is to the detection of offenders and the presentation to the courts of the evidence secured against them. To the great majority of persons who suffer from juvenile delinquents the laws and the courts are invisible and intangible; it is the policeman who is in sight, and must bear with the complaints and criticisms of the sufferers and the abuse of the families and friends of the delinquents.

I have made heretofore but one suggestion as to juvenile offenders, and that was expressed in this form in my annual report for the police year 1908: —

There is one powerful ally without whom this contest for law and order cannot be successfully fought. That is the parent. He is careless now and will so remain as long as the offences of his children cost him nothing. Make him pay for them through fines and he will become interested and efficient; possibly he will even employ those forms of chastisement which he alone practically has now the right to inflict.

I was aware at that time and am still aware of the doubtful constitutionality of a statute which should undertake to compel one person to pay under criminal process the penalty for an offence committed by another, even though the offender were his own juvenile son; but constitutional or not, the Legislature has passed unfavorably upon bills of this purport proposed from time to time by private citizens. One present difficulty lies in the provision of law which forbids the commitment of a person under fourteen years of age, except in a single remote contingency, for nonpayment of a fine. A judge undertakes to fine a boy under that age, but neither he nor his parents or guardians can be compelled to pay, and if they refuse, the judge must nullify the sentence which he considered fitting and release the boy. Some judges long ago came to regard such a procedure as farcical, and to a large extent to refuse summonses for boys under fourteen years of age unless the character of the offence charged or the record of previous offences indicated that perhaps the boy might be sent with propriety to an institution.

Section 1, chapter 456, Acts of 1911, "An act to make uniform the law relating to desertion and nonsupport of wife by husband or of children by either father or mother," is sometimes quoted as authority for imposing penalties upon parents of children convicted of specific delinquencies; but neither in purpose nor in operation is it applicable to such cases.

The keynote of the existing legislation as to juvenile offences is found in section 2, chapter 413, Acts of 1906, as follows: —

This act shall be liberally construed to the end that the care, custody and discipline of the children brought before the court shall approximate as nearly as possible that which they should receive from their parents, and that, as far as practicable, they shall be treated, not as criminals, but as children in need of aid, encouragement and guidance. Proceedings against children under this act shall not be deemed to be criminal proceedings.

I regard that section as a perfect statement of the relation which ought to subsist between offenders under seventeen years of age and the courts; and the procedure established in this act and others of a similar character is entirely consistent. The courts understand the processes, humane and sociological, through which juvenile offenders by so large a majority are allowed to escape punishment; but the boy does not understand. His mind works directly to net results, and those results he expresses in his own way in such terms as "I got off," or "He didn't do a thing to me;" so that his experience in court appears to his companions as a distinction rather than a warning. The moral "atmosphere" of a time or a place exerts a powerful influence. If the atmosphere of a shop, a factory or a public department is one of looseness, laziness, dishonesty or the reverse, those defects, or the good qualities which are antithetical to them, will appear in the majority of the persons employed. If the atmosphere of a street, a neighborhood or a city is one of disorder or contempt for the law, the effect will be visible in the lawlessness of individuals. The present system of dealing with juvenile offenders is doubtless correct in theory and consistent in procedure. In many individual cases it surely has accomplished much good; but I fear that by largely eliminating the idea of force, and by deprecating even harshness, it has helped, though only helped, to create an atmosphere in which the masses of boys standing between those who would be orderly or would be disorderly under any conditions natural to their situation are likely to turn towards those whose audacious leadership makes lawlessness attractive.

The street corner plays an important part in the process by which boys become hoodlums and hoodlums become criminals; and yet there is no statute, and in Boston, unlike other cities of the Commonwealth, there is no ordinance, which gives the police even reasonable authority over men and boys who loiter on sidewalks or obstruct them. Under the semblance of an ordinance which exists, the person loitering or obstructing must receive from a policeman five minutes' notice to move. Should he not have moved at the end of five minutes he may be brought before a court, but the policeman must be prepared to prove that the offender loitered or obstructed "wilfully, wantonly and maliciously." The words "wantonly and maliciously" were inserted in the ordinance about ten years ago by the city council, in order that it might become practically impossible to secure a conviction. Several unsuccessful attempts have been made to remove the words "wantonly and maliciously." In January of the present year an amendment to that effect, prepared by the corporation counsel and officially recommended by the mayor, was rejected by the city council, with but two friendly votes in a membership of nine.

Policemen, even though deprived of legal support, can exercise a certain personal authority over street boys, but as the boys perfectly understand the situation, authority thus exercised, with no fear of punishment behind it, is effective only in the actual presence of the policeman, "by consent of the governed," so to speak; and compliance ends when he passes on to other parts of his route.

The taint of rowdyism seems to be upon two-thirds of the boys and young men who stand at the corners or lounge about the streets, especially at night. It is shown in the set of the cap, the roll of the shoulders, the boisterous talk, the rude scuffling, the insulting epithet and sometimes the cowardly blow ready for man or woman who seems defenceless. There are thousands of such boys and young men in Boston, rarely committing in the presence of a policeman an act for which they can be prosecuted, but playing the hoodlum whenever opportunity offers, drawing their amusement from the sufferings which they are able to inflict upon orderly people, and turning readily to the commission of any crime which promises to be safe and profitable. Their homes apparently have taught them neither morals nor manners; the churches have lost their hold upon them if hold they ever had; the schools have given them education enough to read the sporting news, the unclean stories and reports and the vulgar jokes which fill the only printed pages that interest them; philanthropic persons of the best intentions have patted them on the back, have told them what fine fellows they were and have stimulated instead of discouraging that vanity which is natural to youth; and when under seventeen, the laws have established them as delinquent children, without provision for the kind of punishment which to the delinquent child is most convincing.

Respectfully submitted,

STEPHEN O'MEARA,

Police Commissioner for the City of Boston.

The number of arrests for the year was 81,767, being an increase of 6,271 over last year, and 7,684 more than the average for the past five years. There were 54,951 persons arrested for drunkenness, being 5,105 more than last year, and 6,103 more than the average for the past five years. Of the arrests for drunkenness this year there was an increase of 10.79 per cent. in males and an increase of 4.44 per cent. in females over last year. (See Tables XI., XIII.)

Of the total number of arrests for the year (81,767), 758 were for violations of the city ordinances; that is to say, 1 arrest in 107 was for such offence or .92 per cent.

Fifty-four and twelve hundredths per cent. of the persons taken into custody were between the ages of twenty and forty. (See Table XII.)

The number of persons punished by fines was 12,796, and the fines amounted to $132,570.61. (See Table XIII.)

Sixty-six persons were committed to the State Prison, 5,352 to the House of Correction, 81 to the Women's Prison, 192 to the Reformatory Prison and 2,478 to other institutions. The total years of imprisonment were 2 life, 407 indefinite, 3,324 years, 4 months, 16 days; the total number of days' attendance in court by officers was 48,819; and the witness fees earned by them amounted to $13,131.23.

The value of property taken from prisoners and lodgers was $156,006.73.

Seventy-six witnesses were detained at station houses; 85 were accommodated with lodgings, a decrease of 30 from last year. There was an increase of 14.28 per cent. from last year in the number of insane persons taken in charge, an increase of about 14.33 per cent. in the number of sick and injured persons assisted, and an increase of about 4.88 per cent. in the number of lost children cared for.

The average amount of property stolen in the city for the five years from 1909 to 1913, inclusive, was $161,425.69; in 1913 it was $157,546.12 or $3,879.57 less than the average. The amount of property stolen in and out of the city which was recovered by the Boston police, was $314,379.92, as against $291,674.57 last year, or $22,705.35 more.

The average amount of fines imposed by the courts for the five years from 1909 to 1913, inclusive was $139,435.70; in 1913 it was $132,570.61, or $6,865.09 less than the average.

The average number of days' attendance in court was 47,118; in 1913 it was 48,819, or 1,701 more than the average. The average amount of witness fees earned was $13,196.87; in 1913 it was $13,131.23, or $65.64 less than the average. (See Table XIII.)

Drunkenness.

In arrests for drunkenness the average per day was 150. There were 5,105 more persons arrested than in 1912, an increase of 10.24 per cent.; 46.88 per cent. of the arrested persons were nonresidents and 47.92 per cent. were of foreign birth. (See Table XI.)

Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

The "Identification Room" now contains 41,138 photographs, 34,278 of which are photographs with Bertillon measurements, a system used by the department during the past fifteen years. In accordance with the Revised Laws, chapter 225, sections 18 and 21, we are allowed photographs with Bertillon measurements taken of convicts in the State Prison and Reformatory, a number of which have already been added to our Bertillon cabinets. This, together with the adoption of the system by the department in 1898, is and will continue to be of great assistance in the identification of criminals. A large number of important identifications have thus been made during the year for this and other police departments, through which the sentences in many instances have been materially increased. The records of 1,384 criminals have been added to the records kept in this Bureau, which now contains a total of 36,117. The number of cases reported at this office which have been investigated during the year is 6,615. There are 25,259 cases reported on the assignment books kept for this purpose, and reports made on these cases are filed away for future reference. Letters and telegrams to the number of about 3,500 yearly are now filed with the numbered reports to which they refer, so that all the papers pertaining to a case can be found in the same envelope, thus simplifying matters when information is desired on any case. The system of indexing adopted by this Bureau for the use of the department now contains a list of records, histories, photographs, dates of arrests, etc., of about 142,000 persons. There are also "histories and press clippings" now numbering 6,836 by this Bureau, in envelope form, for police reference.

The finger-print system of identification, which was adopted in June, 1906, has progressed in a satisfactory manner, and with it the identification of criminals is facilitated. It has become very useful in tracing criminals and furnishing corroborating evidence in many instances.

The statistics of the work of this branch of the service are included in the statement of the general work of the department; but as the duties are of a special character, the following statement will be of interest:—

Number of persons arrested, principally for felonies,	1,142
Fugitives from justice from other States, arrested and delivered to officers from those States,	58
Number of cases investigated,	6,615
Number of extra duties performed,	2,763
Number of cases of homicide and supposed homicide investigated and evidence prepared for trial, in court,	97
Number of cases of abortion and supposed abortion investigated and evidence prepared for court,	5
Number of days spent in court by officers,	3,092
Amount of stolen property recovered,	$172,907.73
Number of years' imprisonment imposed by court, 426 years, 11 months
Number of photographs added to "Rogues' Gallery,"	2,492
